VAST TREASURE DISCOVERED IN PALACE OF EXILED PRINCE

A PRINCE had fled from his royal palace, taking with him all of the wealth and treasure he could carry. But the palace fell into the hands of others, who, knowing of the enormous wealth of that house for centuries, were sure of a vast treasure left behind.

Restless eyes and ruthless hands searched. They were upon the point of giving up when a slight unevenness in the surface of one of the beautiful wall tapestries was observed. The gorgeous fabric was torn from the wall and a bit of hastily thrown up brick work was discovered!

Workmen with tools were hastily summoned, and after feverish moments down came the bricks, revealing a steel safe! The safe was opened! Before their dazzled eyes the onlookers beheld sparkling heaps of diamonds, pearls, rubies, sapphires, emeralds, articles of gold, platinum and silver all studded with jewels in exquisite workmanship! And estimated at a value of 50,000,000 rubles!

This is not a page from fiction, so thrilling to human nature, but the story of the discovery by agents of the Russian Soviet Government of a mass of jewels hidden in a wall of the Youssouppoff Palace in Moscow, created a Museum of Military History by the Revolution—the palace of Prince Youssouppoff, husband of the Czar's niece and himself one of the grandest nobles of Old Russia, in whose home the monk, Rasputin, was killed after a nightmare struggle.

There is particular interest in this story because of the fact that only last Spring America saw this same Prince and the jewels which he managed to slip over the Crimean border after successfully making an escape from his turbulent Russia. In 1919 he fled, carrying with him a fortune in gems and two valuable Rembrandts hidden beneath worthless canvases.

It was generally understood that Prince Youssouppoff was the custodian and to all intents the owner of all the Romanoff jewels which had not been seized by the Soviet authorities. Shortly after his arrival in London he was robbed of close to a million dollars' worth of diamonds. He never recovered them.

When Prince Youssouppoff came to America he brought with him precious gems valued up to $1,500,000. He had come to the United States not only to sell these but to try to recover his two Rembrandts from Joseph E. Widener, financier and art collector. The latter claimed he had bought the pictures outright, while the former declared the sale had been only with the understanding that he could buy them back within a given time by returning, with interest, the money advanced. And in the testimony of the young Prince it was disclosed how treasures and jewels that come to light when empires fall stream into the markets of America, England and France.

The discovery of treasure, as this recent one, is not rare in Russia today, but this one is the largest and most important. Today it is the property of the State, and a staff of experts has been assigned to determine its value.

IF we are to take the word of Mr. John Lee Baldwin of Babylon, Long Island, N. Y., there is nothing for us to do but believe that that worthy gentleman is a Pooh Bah in his own line—that he was born yawning. Ducking work is his specialty, he affirms, and he openly declares that he never worked and never will.

"Take it easily—you'll last longer," is his philosophy.

Mr. Baldwin does not believe in this twentieth century method of hustle and bustle. He is 58 years old and brags that he is a professional idler, making idling his trade, his life work. And yet, he is always busy doing something with his head or his hands with the firm conviction that what he does is for pastime only. It is doubtful if any one gets more honest joy out of life than he does.

Mr. John Lee Baldwin's pastime—that of "ducking work"—actually means that he works on ducks. While his brain relaxes he is alert in his shop, hewing and carving ducks, snipe, and other American water-fowl from huge blocks of wood. When his model satisfies him, Mr. Baldwin will stifle a yawn, lazily reach for his paint pots and brush, and deftly—but in a relaxing manner, mind you—bring the carved block of wood to life with the most astonishing colors.

This admittedly lazy gentleman doesn't have to labor because he has a private income of sufficient size to support himself, his wife and his two sons. He declares that he'll give a brand new ten dollar bill to any one who gets more out of life than he does. But at the same time, it's a safe guess that his little family have never grouped themselves in a row and chanted "Everybody Works But Father" for the special benefit of this frightfully lazy head of the house.

TURNING CATSKILL MOUNTAIN TOWN INTO A LAKE 150 FEET DEEP

DOOMED TO VANISH BENEATH THE WATERS: VILLAGE OF GILBOA, N. Y., in the Catskill Region That Will Be Inundated to a Depth of 150 Feet on the Completion in October of the Great Dam That Will Block Schoharie Creek and Transform the Town Into a Lake.
(Times Wide World Photos.)

EIGHT years ago the residents of the little town of Gilboa, N. Y., a prosperous little farming centre in the Catskill Mountains, were told that in about the year 1925 they would have to pack up their belongings and move.

"Because we are going to turn this little town into a lake," was the answer that the authorities gave the curious questioners of the inhabitants of Gilboa.

And now that the year 1925 has rolled around the promised event is about to be accomplished, for the town that dates from 1760 will soon be at the bottom of a huge artificial lake 150 feet deep, five miles long and holding 22,000,000,000 gallons of water for the supply of New York City.

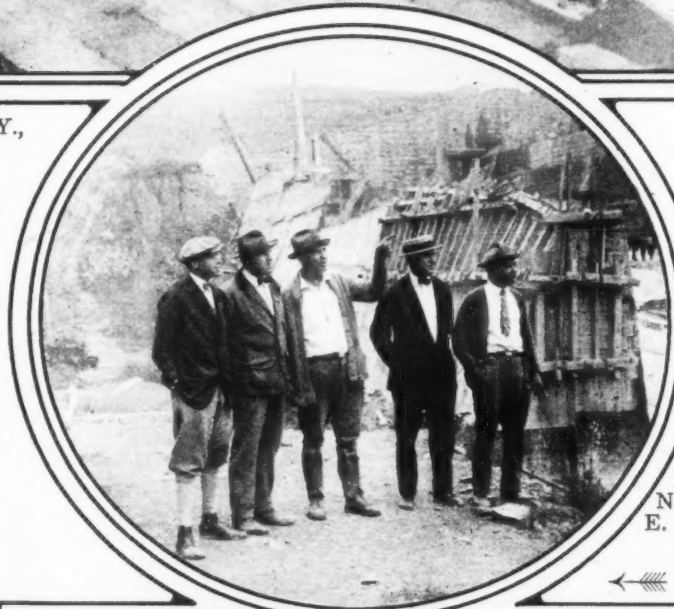

The waters of Schoharie Creek, blocked by an enormous dam, will be carried from this artificial lake through eighteen miles of tunnel to feed the Ashokan Reservoir. It is cut through the Catskill Mountains and in its course drops approximately 500 feet from the Gilboa Reservoir to the Ashokan.

By October, it is believed, the dam will be complete. Stretching across the valley of Schoharie Creek from peak to peak of the neighboring hills, it will rest on what was once the centre of the town. Fourteen miles of highway will be inundated when the great dam stops the flow of the creek, and from Gilboa to the Mohawk River the stream which once flowed full and free will be largely a dry, stony bed.

The City of New York began condemnation proceedings to acquire the land for the site of the dam and reservoir eight years ago. Six years have been spent in construction and labor. The dam cost approximately $7,000,000 and the cost of the entire project is expected to approach $22,000,000.

Today most of the 200 residents of the little farming village are scattered, and the others await the final thirty-day notice. Then they will pack up their belongings, give a final glance at their little homes which will soon repose in the reputed domain of Davy Jones, and depart to found new homesteads. The vast dam, now nearing completion, overtops even the village church steeple, which, with other remaining structures, soon will be razed and the ruins removed, preparatory to the turning loose of the floodgates.

SARGENT'S LESSER WORKS BRING RECORD PRICES IN LONDON

"A JAVANESE DANCER,"

Painting by the Late John Singer Sargent, That Brought $11,000 at the London Sale.

THE fame of the late John Singer Sargent as the greatest of American portrait painters had been made secure in his own country many years before his death. In art circles abroad he had also been recognized as in the first rank of contemporary painters. But the full extent of the appeal he had made to his own generation was not realized until the recent record-breaking sale of his works in London. The prices paid were amazing, over $700,000 passing into the auctioneer's hands on the first day of the sale, while purchases on succeeding days brought the total close to the million mark. Never had there been such a representative gathering of experts from all quarters of the globe ready to pay almost any price for the master's works.

What made the event the more remarkable was the fact that the majority of the 237 pictures and drawings at the sale were of a sketchy character and had been regarded lightly by Sargent himself. What he had classed as his most important works had found eager purchasers during his lifetime. Most of the sketches posthumously sold had been made for himself solely. When wearied with a season's work in portraiture, it had been his custom to hasten away to see what nature and the sun had been doing between them and keep score on the game. Then he would return with a gay sheaf of these brilliant registrations.

By a singular coincidence, on the very day of the sale in London, the Grand Central Art Galleries of New York announced the sale of a Sargent portrait of Miss Ena Wertheimer to an American collector for $40,000.

The Movie Chatterbox Says:

THEY call it the Infant Industry, but one of my spies informs me that the Movies has ordered its first pair of Oxford "bags." Famous writers are doing their bit to make the boy fit the pants. We have Joseph Hergesheimer, Joseph Conrad, Oscar Wilde's "Lady Windermere's Fan" and many others. And now Sinclair Lewis, author of "Main Street," "Babbitt" and "Arrowsmith," has been engaged by Jesse L. Lasky to write the story of Manhattan Island for the Paramount epic, "New York," which is to be produced in connection with the 300th anniversary celebration of the city next Spring. Mr. Lewis's story will be a pictorial history of New York from the time when Peter Minuit bought Manhattan Island from the Indians for the startling sum of $24 up to the present day.

For "them as knows their movies" it will be of interest to learn that Charles Ray, who has been making a screen comeback since his disastrous (financially) "Courtship of Miles Standish," has been signed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for a series of pictures. His first will be with lovely Pauline Starke in "A Little Bit of Broadway," in which he will again be the bashful, awkward country lad. While on this subject, permit me to report that Francis X. Bushman, who staged a comeback in "Ben-Hur," will be the leading man for Mae Murray in her next screen effort. And Francis is a grandfather, too!

Permit this department to twang its musical lyre for a moment and mumble a few words concerning Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, director of the Rialto and Rivoli in New York. Dr. Riesenfeld surprised the natives by adopting a jazz policy in securing the services of Ben Bernie and his band for the two theatres. And it is a welcome change. It is my opinion that the movies demand fine orchestras and fine overtures, but there is altogether too much of the classics. They are greatly overdone. These symphony orchestras in the finer picture palaces appear to stick consistently to a dozen or so overtures and harp on them mercilessly. It would be a welcome thing, indeed, to turn them loose now and then over a fine old opera of Victor Herbert, Reginald De Koven and others, and have a little less of the "Poet-and-Peasant" variety. Dr. Riesenfeld shows his intelligence by giving us a happy medium, and this is as it should be. The movies need music, fine music, but why not put the woodwinds in mothballs for a short time?

Thomas Meighan has gone to Ireland to make his next photoplay, with the Lakes of Killarney, Muckross Abbey, Ross Castle and Blarney Castle as a background. . . . Erich von Stroheim will not only direct Connie Talmadge in her next, "East of the Setting Sun," he will act in it like everything. . . . Work on Conrad's "Lord Jim" will start shortly with Percy Marmont in the title rôle and Madeleine Hurlock and Noah Beery in the cast. . . . Dick Barthelmess's next will be "Just Suppose," from the stage play by A. E. Thomas.

The Kind of People who Advocate Pelmanism

Here are only a few of many famous men and women who advocate Pelmanism. Not only do they advise you to use Pelmanism to help you achieve something in life, but they use its principles themselves. If this scientific system of mind training is of value to such men and women, can it fail to benefit you? Find out what Pelmanism has already done for over 650,000 people—send for a copy of the book illustrated below. It will be sent without charge.

NO doubt you have often heard of Pelmanism, but probably you have carelessly thought of it as "just another new-fangled movement. Some more tommyrot! The usual mental-pep stuff!"

Can it, however, be "tommyrot," when such people as those pictured here, men and women of the highest intelligence and distinction—prominent statesmen, artists, novelists, jurists, business men, military men, publicists—advocate Pelmanism in the most enthusiastic terms?

Pelmanism has spread, with the force of a religious movement, all over the world. There is no secret as to how it performs its seeming miracles of regeneration among discouraged people. It takes the principles of Applied Psychology, simplifies them so that they can be understood by everybody, and then arranges them into a remarkable system of mental training.

The results of this system are sometimes almost unbelievable. It helps its users in the most practical way. It changes their outlook upon life; it changes their circumstances. They begin to accomplish things they had heretofore only dreamed of. They do more, earn more. Instances are on record (on file and open to inspection) where income has increased 800, 900 and 1,000 per cent. Yet, remarkable though they may seem, these results can be simply explained.

The reason most people fall miserably below what they dream of attaining in life is that certain mental faculties in them become absolutely atrophied through disuse, just as a muscle often does. If, for instance, you lay for a year in bed, you would sink to the ground when you arose; your leg muscles, unused for so long, could not support you.

It is no different with those rare mental faculties, which you often envy others for possessing, and which you fear you do not possess. You actually do possess them, but they are almost atrophied, like unused muscles, simply because they are faculties which you seldom, if ever, use. The simple effect of Pelmanism is to re-arouse and to train these faculties.

Be honest with yourself. You know in your heart that you have failed, failed miserably, to attain what you once dreamed of. Was that fine ambition unattainable? Or was there just something wrong with you? Analyze yourself, and you will see that at bottom there was a weakness somewhere in you.

Perhaps your senses were not properly trained; or your memory, for lack of training, was like a sieve; or you were a victim of the vicious habit of mind-wandering; or because you seldom used your will power, you became a spineless, hesitating, vacillating individual. Or perhaps you had little or no imagination.

What was the matter with you? Find out by means of Pelmanism; then develop the particular mental faculty that you lack. You CAN develop it easily; Pelmanism will show you just how; 650,000 Pelmanists, many of whom were held back by your very problem, will tell you that this is true.

The whole remarkable story of Pelmanism is told in a little book, "Scientific Mind-Training." It explains in detail the simple principles; it tells stories—almost unbelievable, some of them—of people whose lives and circumstances have been revolutionized after a short time.

We will gladly send this book to you, free, if you are at all interested in Pelmanism. To ask for it involves you in no obligation whatsoever; you will not be bothered; no salesman will call on you. It will be left to your judgment after reading the book, whether you can afford not to use the principles of Pelmanism to help you "find yourself." Send for this book now; when such distinguished people as those shown here advise you to take up Pelmanism, how can you justify yourself if you do not try to find out, at least, whether Pelmanism can be of help to you in your ambitions? Mail the coupon below—now, before you forget about it.
